

Focus Awards Level 4 NVQ Diploma in Advice and Guidance (RQF)

Overview

Level 4 NVQ Diploma in Advice and Guidance (RQF) is a UK OFQUAL accredited 100% online qualification for experienced practitioners who work directly with clients, disseminating information, advice and guidance (IAG). The qualification looks at developing the practical skills of learners working in all advice and guidance settings. Learners might also have some managerial or training responsibilities or may be working as career development professionals. The Level 4 Advice and Guidance Diploma supports those in a role which involves providing specialist information, advice and guidance to clients, reporting to senior management, networking with associated services as well as training, evaluating and developing the service provision, thus helping them to become qualified advice and guidance professionals, career advisors, career counsellors, coaches, etc. Learners at this level are expected to have a more dynamic relationship with other organisations. These specialist skills are sought after in a growing number of industries and are commonly required for college tutors and other support roles. If you wish to further your career prospects, holding this Level 4 qualification will have significant advantages for your career advancement.

Scope of this Qualification

This Level 4 Diploma in Advice and Guidance is suitable for those providing advice and guidance in a professional or voluntary role. Some may have managerial or training responsibilities. Potential learners may be from sectors such as careers guidance, any trade union, school/any educational institution, housing, human resources, health and social care, etc.

Potential learners come from different industries/fields who currently work within any type of advice and guidance setting, providing factual, current and impartial information to clients and presenting ideas in an accessible form for them to consider, thus defining and providing routes which could assist clients in reaching their requirements. Since our learners come from different advice and guidance sectors, we have offered the course in a way that could suit all of them.
